Executive Overview The Office of the State Chief Information Officer (OCIO) for the State of California provides leadership for the State's information technology programs and works collaboratively with other information technology leaders throughout state government. The OCIO's role, is as a strategic planner and architect for the State's information technology programs and as a leader in formulating and advancing a vision for that program.

Enterprise Architecture Program - develops, maintains and enables the implementations of California Enterprise Architecture. An enterprise architecture program allows for an integrated and cohesive approach to implementing technology initiatives. This facilitates efficiency and enhanced service. The OCIO with EAP is charged with developing a comprehensive Enterprise Architecture for the Executive Branch's IT program. The OCIO has released a number of documents for your review. Primary among these is the Enterprise Architecture Developers Guide, released April, 15 2009. The EA Developers Guide provides the instructions and information necessary to report the Business Reference Model (BRM) and Technical Reference Model (TRM) data by forms which are linked to in the document. The next steps for this document will be to include the Service Component Reference Model instructions and templates. The objective of the EA Developers Guide is to define and end-to-end process to initiate, implement, and sustain an enterprise architecture program.

CALIFORNIA GREEN CHEMISTRY PROGRAM
ALTERNATIVES ANALYSIS FOR SAFER PRODUCTS

California Health and Safety Code Section 25252
Sample proposed outline of regulations to implement California's green chemistry program

IMPORTANT NOTE TO WIKI USERS:

On September 29, 2008, Governor Schwarzenegger signed two laws that are part of California's Green Chemistry Program. These new laws authorize California state government to develop an alternatives analysis framework to stimulate the rapid acceleration of replacement of harmful chemicals and ingredients with safer alternatives in products sold in California.

As we begin the process of rule development for these laws, we have created a "wiki" to capture the input of California's most valuable resource, its people, to spur discussions and ideas as the draft rule is being developed. This wiki invites informal collaboration and input into rule development process, and encourages all persons to draft regulations they would like to see the State adopt. In addition to wiki input, there will be upcoming public workshops to solicit additional input and to discuss input received from the wiki. This wiki information gathering process is a precursor to the formal rulemaking process required by the California Administrative Procedure Act (APA) which DTSC will begin when a full set of draft regulations have been developed. For those stakeholders who are interested in upcoming public workshops and inform and formal comment periods, please visit www.dtsc.ca.gov/greenchemistry where upcoming events and dates will be posted.

WIKI OUTLINE

I. REGULATORY "TRIGGER": When is the Requirement to Do an Alternatives Analysis Triggered?

Please explain how DTSC has determined that there is a requirment to do such an analysis.

If a product has a chemical of concern an alternatives analysis should be required. The threshold for being considered a chemical of concern should be low. If any party has a verifiable concern with a chemical/product it should be considered to be a chemical of concern. This will create more pressure on manufacturers to embrace the benign by design concept early in the process.

What would be the definition of a "verifiable concern"?
